

ZeroHype Anti-Slop Manifesto

someone has a pipeline problem. they hire an agency, a consultant, or a head of growth. six weeks later there's a strategy document. twelve weeks later there's a content calendar and an automation sequence. six months later the pipeline problem is still there but now it has a narrative and a color palette.

this is not a cynicism exercise. this is just what happens when activity gets mistaken for diagnosis.

"activity is not the same thing as diagnosis."

what we believe

strategy fails before execution does.

most b2b marketing fails at the strategy layer, not the execution layer. the campaigns don't underperform because of bad copy or wrong send times. they underperform because the assumptions underneath them were never tested.

wrong icp. vague goal. channel picked for comfort, not fit. message that sounds like every other message in the inbox.

ai didn't create this problem. ai made it faster and cheaper to produce more of it. we've reviewed over 200 cold outreach sequences that weren't working. the failure reasons repeat. they almost always do.

"personalization at scale" is not a solution to broken positioning. it's broken positioning, delivered personally, at volume, with a first name in the subject line.

what we do

forensic diagnosis.

no padding.

we audit b2b marketing that isn't working and tell you exactly why it isn't working. not a report with 47 recommendations. not a retainer to implement the strategy we just told you was wrong.

a specific, honest answer to the question: what is actually broken here and what would it take to fix it.

cold outreach that fails, fails for reasons. campaigns that underperform, underperform for reasons. most companies never find out what those reasons are because they're already running the next campaign.

"we find the reasons."

what we don't do

we're not an agency.

we don't build you a content machine. we don't manage your linkedin. we don't run your ads. we don't optimize your automation sequences.

we don't compete with agencies that sell volume. we don't compete with consultants who need a 6-month retainer to tell you something you could have figured out in week two.

one thing: diagnosis. the name is the constraint. if we can't say it plainly, we don't say it.

start with a free tool.

paste your cold email. run your campaign through the predictor. see what's actually broken before you pay anything.

cold email roaster. free →

Source: <https://zerohypelab.com/manifesto/>